Singing

Last night, I had the pleasure to go to a song leading workshop in Checotah that was set up by Wyane Atkinson from the Sallisaw Church of Christ. He taught Sam, Jeff, me, and a few other men how to lead singing. We learned how to keep pace with the music through conducting, we learned how pitch worked, and more. But before we got into the actual music side of things, since he the minister there at Sallisaw, he saw this opportunity to talk about worship and what it means to us and what it should mean for the people of God. One thing that he mentioned that stuck with me is that we aren't people that like to sing naturally. We have used something such as singing and worship as a form of entertainment. Now I am not trying to offend anybody by saying that everyone needs to go a workshop and become preachers, worship leaders, teachers, etc. But as Wyane said, in the past few generations, the Church as a whole has gone to this mindset that our experience matters.

When we look at Colossians 3:15-17, Paul calls the church to be filled with peace, the Word of Christ, and thankfulness. He uses the words you and your when he talks about praising God, meaning that he is talking to the people individually. Each person has that duty to worship, not just sit there and watch other people do it for them. So as men and women in the church, we are each called to be a participant and be a part of worship, not just because we are commanded to, but because of who it reminds us of. We are doing this for our Lord and Savior, who gave us all and is in all! So let's turn our focus to him and give him our best!
