Sacrifice

Last weekend, I got the pleasure of going back home and getting to see my family. While I was there, we were doing a lot to spend time together. I played disc golf, played basketball, and get a little bit of time to spend with my family. On that Saturday, I went to the Hydro congregation's men's breakfast.

When I was there, Garrett Bernethy was there and he spoke for the breakfast. He had two things that he wanted us to take away before it was over. Those things came in the form of two questions: What have I done for God today? And what will I do for God today? To be honest, I don't remember exactly what scriptures he used to talk about this. However, when I think of those two questions, it makes me go back to Romans 12:1-2. "Therefore I urge you brethren, by the mercies of God, to present your bodies a living and holy sacrifice, acceptable to God, which is your spiritual service of worship. And do not be conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind, so that you may prove what the will of God is, that which is good and acceptable and perfect."

As Christians, we are called to be living sacrifices, which means that when we are baptized, we are not just always going to be okay. Being baptized is just the beginning of our relationship with God. Unfortunately, sin is still in our world today, but when we have that relationship with God, we are going to give up whatever it is that is in between us and God. And it isn't just one thing; it can come in the form of multiple things, but we have to make that decision of giving up things we love and the desires we have for an eternity of glory.
