Herod

As you study your New Testament Gospels, knowledge of the Herodian Dynasty is very helpful. From dating the birth of Christ to understanding the death of John the Baptist to the crucifixion and beyond, we see the influence of this family. Much of what we know, historically, is from the writings of Josephus, a first century historian.

Herod, the Great, was born in 47 B.C. and died in 4 B.C. He was king when Christ was born. He ordered the killing of the children in Bethlehem. His death is significant, since it tells us that Jesus was born before 4 B.C. If you remember right in Matthew 2:20, Joseph was told that those who seek the child's life were dead. Beginning in 20/19 B.C., he began the rebuilding of the temple; this is the temple that was in existence in the time of Christ. Rabbinic literature claims, "He who has not seen the Temple of Herod has never seen a beautiful building."

Herod Antipas was the most mentioned in the New Testament. He was the one who Jesus went before on his journey to the cross. He is also responsible for the beheading of John the Baptist when John spoke against his marriage to his niece, Herodias.

Phillip, the tetrarch, ruled the northern part of Herod's kingdom when he died. He built two cities. First, he rebuilt and enlarged Paneas and renamed it Caesarea Philippi. Here, Peter made his confession of faith to Jesus and was given the revelation of the church (Mt 16:13–20; Mk 8:27–30). Next, he rebuilt and enlarged Bethsaida and renamed it Julias. Here, Jesus healed the blind man (Mk 8:22–26), and in a nearby desert place, he fed the 5,000 (Lk 9:10–17).

Agrippa was the black sheep of the family. You probably remember him from the killing of James in Acts and his death being eaten of worms. Agrippa II did not begin to rule until 50 A.D., but he was in charge of the temple treasury and appointing the high priest. He and his sister, Bernice, heard the defense of Paul in Acts 25–26.

There are more Herods, but these are the most noteworthy from a scriptural standpoint.
