Real Christianity

In the last several years, I have really begun to coin the phrase, "Real Christianity." I think the world needs this more than ever. I have been struggling to put a definition with the phrase, but this is kind of my thought.

Real Christianity sees the world for what this world is...flawed, ruled by the prince of this world (Satan), and not headed for redemption but for destruction. We realize that we must live in it yet not be a part of its darkness. We realize that it rains on the just and the unjust, that bad things happen because of the flawed nature of this world not because of a predetermined plan.

Real Christianity counts the cost of being a Christian. It tries to understand the meaning and significance of cross carrying every day. It understands the commitment of being a true disciple of Christ.

Real Christianity presents Christ as a real answer to the real problems in people's lives. It understands that faith without works is dead. We are the hands and feet of Jesus on this earth, our involvement is required. We can, oftentimes, be the answer to another person's prayers by representing Jesus Christ in this world.

Real Christianity understands the power of God's word and the power of prayer. It understands the promise of God is the blessing of eternal life, that this reward is more than worth any cost our faith requires of us in this life.

This world needs real Christianity!! Not a fairy tale Jesus from a once upon a time story. It needs to know the life and message of the man from Galilee. It needs to know the cost of the cross and the glory of the resurrection. It needs to know Christ glorified and Satan defeated.
